Fruit Trees and Small Fruit Plants

FRUIT TREES and SMALL FRUIT PLANTS may be successfully planted in the fall. Such varieties as Cherries, Gooseberries and Currants do better fall planted as they make root and growth very early in the spring, often before spring planting can be done. It is best to hill up the soil a few inches about the fruit trees and mulch. In some places it is necessary to protect the bodies of the trees from rabbits by wrapping with tarred paper.

Columbia
New Brilliant Pink Rose

Roses

WE recommend fall setting of hardy roses. They should be banked up with soil to the height of eight or ten inches and mulched about the plants to prevent too severe freezing of the roots. With the approach of warm weather, the mound should be levelled and the roses pruned back to sound, live wood. Fall set roses will bloom in June at about the same season as old established rose plants.

Regale Lily
Lilium Regale

Perennials

WE do not recommend fall setting of all Perennials, as some varieties are shallow rooted and unless carefully planted on proper soil and carefully mulched, they are liable to heave out and winter kill. However, the following varieties are especially adapted for fall planting and will give better results than spring set plants.
